"HIGH ON A WINDY HILL"

Julie Hamilton, small-town Southern girl, regrets her half-hearted engagement to Kenneth Terry. When Barry Caldwell, young Arizona rancher who has met with reverses and is hiking to New York for a radio audition, appears at her back door and faints from hunger, she falls in love with him at first sight. She gives him a room in the garage and invites him to her birthday party, pretending she wants to get even with Kenneth for the attention he has been paying to Isolda Fleming, visitor from New York. At the party, however, when Barry tells her he loves her, she confesses her love for him. When Kenneth, in a jealous rage, strikes the Westerner, she breaks her engagement. Her cousin Normandy Buford takes Barry home with him, then sends for Julie, saying Barry is determined to fight Kenneth. She knows he is in no condition to fight and to stop him desperately tells him that she has merely been flirting with him, that she loves Kenneth. He bitterly stalks out.

CHAPTER XIV

"WELL," said Normandy as soon as Barry was gone. "That seems to be that!" Julie, however, now burst into sobs in earnest.

"Oh Nombly!" she wailed. "I love him—I love him! And I lied to him, said those cruel things to him! But it was the only way I had to do it to stop him!"

Normandy stared at her. "Julie, do you really care for that young man?"

"Oh yes yes! You didn't think I meant what I said did you?"

Normandy looked at Edith. "Is this true?"

Edith nodded. "I'm afraid it is."

"And she really has broken her engagement to Ken?"

"Yes," said Edith.

Julie looked up then, a sudden fear in her eyes. "Oh Nombly," she begged, "go after Barry! Don't let him get away! Keep him here and—and—I'll come back tomorrow and explain to him—tell him the truth!"

"Oh dear," she burst into fresh tears. "Oh dear, he probably won't believe me! He'll probably never forgive me—never! I love him again!"

As Normandy hesitated, Julie rose and pushed him toward the door.

"Quick! Bring him back before he has time to get away! Edith and I will leave!"

Normandy hurried out then in pursuit of Barry.

"Come on Edith!" said Julie, seizing her friend's hand.

The two summoned Normandy's servant to escort them home, and followed a roundabout route to avoid the possibility of running into Barry.

MEANWHILE, Normandy had caught up with Barry a couple of blocks from his cottage. The young Westerner was striding along as though he pursued him, his head down.

Normandy who had had to run to overtake him was out of breath as he came up beside him and caught hold of his arm.

"Caldwell!" he panted. "Don't run off like this!"

Barry jerked his arm away. "Do you think I'm going back there to be laughed at?"

"But the girls have gone home—and surely you don't intend to walk the streets all night!"

"Not!" said Barry. "I intend to get my guitar and clothes out of—"

out of her garage and get out of town!"

"Now now!" Normandy soothed. "That's foolish! There's no need to do that tonight. Come along—your bed is ready for you."

He again took the young man's arm and turned him around, steering him back toward the cottage.

"Well, all right," Barry gave in. "But I'm leaving the first thing in the morning!"

They walked along in silence for several minutes.

Then Barry suddenly burst out bitterly. "I must be pretty dumb, Mr. Buford. Should I—should I have had sense enough to know that Julie was still striding me along—for a thrill?"

Normandy was embarrassed. He didn't know how to answer. He would have given a lot to tell Barry the truth, but he knew that he must leave it to Julie to straighten things out—if she could.

After a pause he said slowly. "Women are hard to understand. And Julie is very young. Caldwell, you have to make allowances."

"She's old enough to be like a Jeezabel!" Barry said fiercely.

"I wouldn't be too hard on her. After all—"

"You needn't try to defend her!" Barry cut in. "She's made a fool out of me—but she won't get a chance to do it again! I wouldn't believe her now under oath!"

Normandy sighed and said no more.

THE next morning Julie awoke feeling tense and tired. The night had been virtually sleepless. But she lumped out of bed and hurried to bathe and dress. She must get over to Nombly's before Barry had time to leave.

When she returned to her room after her bath she found Edith sitting on the edge of the bed.

"Well," said the older girl, "how do you feel this morning?"

"Rotten!"

"Has the light of day brought you to your senses—or are you still determined to go over to Nombly's to tell all to your cowboy friend?"

"Of course I'm going over there!" Julie snapped. "Just as soon as I've had breakfast."

Edith was silent a moment, studying her.

"Honestly Julie," she said at last, "hadn't you better think all this over? As far as I can see, you are only building up a lot of grief for yourself. Why not let Barry Caldwell go on his way? You'll soon forget about him—and all that's happened. You'll see."

"Forget about him? Never!"

"But can't you see how utterly impossible the situation is?" Edith persisted. "He's penniless! What will your father say when he hears you've gone crazy over a tramp who stopped at the back door to ask for a drink of water?"

Julie's face was set stubbornly. "I don't care what he says. And if he objects too strenuously, I might even elope with Barry and go hitchhiking to New York with him!"

"Julie! You wouldn't!"

"Just wouldn't I!"

Edith remonstrated further but without effect.

Immediately after breakfast, Julie hurried away. Her heart was pounding as she reached Normandy's cottage. She found the front door open and stepped inside.

She called tremulously. "Yoo-hoo! Anybody home?"

"In here!" Normandy's voice answered.

She went down the hall to the breakfast room, and paused on the threshold. Normandy was alone, lingering over a second cup of coffee. Julie caught her breath. Had—had Barry gone.

Germans Launch Drive In Crete

The British said that the arrival of air invaders had slackened somewhat, possibly because of the terrific losses suffered by the Germans. In Istanbul, it was estimated that the Germans have lost 20 per cent of an invading 25,000 to 28,000 men.

Rome asserted that Italian speed boats had protected a number of fishing craft which managed to slip through the British fleet, landing 50 to 60 men on Crete from each boat.

The German high command claimed that the British have lost 25 warcraft around Crete. It broke down the losses as follows: 11 cruisers, eight destroyers, one submarine, five speed boats. Four of the cruisers were said to have been sunk by the Italian air force.

In addition to British battleships, several cruisers and several destroyers were said to have been damaged. If the German claims are to be believed, Axis airplanes have so far sunk virtually the whole of the east Mediterranean fleet — a most unprobable development.

The Greek government and King George II, it was revealed in Cairo, have fled Crete and are now in Egypt. Their withdrawal was attributed to the danger they might fall into the hands of Nazi parachutists who appeared to have made a special effort to capture them as they tried to capture the Dutch government and Queen Wilhelmina during the invasion of Holland.

Each star on the helmet indicates one hour of flight made in the new Lockheed Interceptor.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH ASSEMBLES GARMENTS, PROVIDES MATERIALS FOR SEWING FOR BRITISH CIVILIAN RELIEF

Two shipping stations have been established on the Pacific Coast by the Christian Science Church where garments for the civilian population of Great Britain are regularly consigned to ships sailing direct to England by way of the Panama Canal.

In this city, the Christian Science War Relief Committee established by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Placerville, is assembling garments, new and used, and providing materials for sewing and knitting to all who wish to participate in this work. Garments are distributed in England by Christian Science committees to all persons in need, regardless of creed.

In some cities sewing groups have been established by the Christian Science War Relief Committee. Garments are cut out by committee workers and given out to those who wish to finish them in their homes or who wish to form a sewing unit. Yarn is also provided for knitting without charge.

Highest grade materials are used, and the types of garments made include children's skirts and dresses, sweaters for men, women and children, night clothing, pinafores, and other types of wearing apparel.

In receiving used clothing the Christian Science War Relief Committee specifies that such articles must be clean and warm and in good repair, comparable to new clothing. Only shoes in first-class repair are received, and no women's shoes with high heels are accepted, since British women are not wearing high heels.

The local committee was established under instructions of The Christian Science War Relief Committee of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. Financial contributions to buy materials are gladly received by the Committee, as are all other contributions.

The Christian Science churches throughout the country established relief committees as soon as the need becomes apparent. Today with the need of garments increasing rapidly, these committees are making every effort to expand their output.

Mussel Quarantine Is Announced By State

SAN DEGO, (UP)—The state board of public health today placed a quarantine on mussels in an effort to cut down the annual death toll in California from mussel poisoning.

Mrs. Margaret Murdock of Sebastopol and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Murdock of Campbell were here over the week visiting Mr. and Mrs. Russell Anderson.

BUDGET, REAPPORTIONMENT AND RELIEF REMAIN IN LEGISLATURE

SACRAMENTO, (UP) — Drive toward adjournment in two weeks if possible, the legislature today had most of the key issues of the 54th session yet to handle in addition to hundreds of secondary bills.

A free conference committee on the biennial budget was to begin work on a compromise as soon as the three senate members were chosen.

The reapportionment bill on the senate third reading calendar for action. Gov. Culbert Olson has vetoed the county control relief bill, and a notice of reconsideration is pending in the senate on the refusal to override the veto. Three votes are needed in the upper house and 11 in the assembly, giving it little chance of success.

THE SPIRIT OF

by JOHN CLINTON

Traffic Pains in the Public Neck. Winners are being sent silk-lined incendiary bombs.

First Award — to the guy who drives in the middle lane and glares at you if you honk your horn. Second Award — to the traffic signal at First and Elm — I never used to be able to get away from it. Even small kids on tricycles could beat me. Third Award — to the heirs of Thomas G. Traffic, the inventor of the traffic problem!

All of which is a lighter way of saying seriously that traffic is bad stuff! That's why Union Oil Company has spent so much money, so much time and so much ingenuity on perfecting New 76 Gasoline—for, as you regular readers know, New 76 is especially made for traffic driving.

It gives you the power to pass the middle-lane loofer—to take off from signals right along with the best of them. And another thing that the Union research men worked out was a combination that would give you silk-smooth performance at those pesky but necessary slow speeds in traffic.

If I were you, I'd accept Union's invitation to make your own test. Wait till the tank's almost empty (so you can really tell) and fill it up with New 76—then hunt yourself up some traffic and jump in. I tried it, and it does just what Union says it will do. Try it, will you? I think you'll thank me for egg-ing you on.

Protecting the Capitol

Capitol police are checking articles carried by visitors for the first time since the World War, when a time bomb exploded in the Senate reception room. Policeman Donald Murphy is shown relieving sightseers of bundles, cameras, and umbrellas at the Rotunda entrance.

The agriculture department reports continued improvement in the demand for farm products. This, of course, will help bolster prices, but farm income in June and July will depend largely on the size and time of marketing of the winter wheat crop.

Government payments during the next two or three months are expected to be small.

But meanwhile, here are the latest notes on various farm products: But prospects of increased loan rates has helped send the price of wheat to the highest point this year, and many dealers are convinced the prices will stay up.

Corn prices also have advanced—and this time, to the highest weekly average since October, 1937. Here again, the price is affected by favorable congressional reaction on a proposal to base crop loans on 85 per cent of parity.

These increased rates would aid cotton farmers, too, but the agriculture department sees little hope for improving the foreign market for American cotton. The department points out that consumption abroad is low. And recent advances in cotton prices have put American cotton at a competitive disadvantage on the world markets.

Government purchases of hogs and lard have given important support to hog prices. Slaughter supplies of hogs during the remainder of the marketing season are expected to be from 12 to 15 per cent smaller than a year earlier.

Slaughter of cattle and calves this year probably will be about five per cent larger than last year. Much of the increase is expected to be grain-fed cattle.

Watch out for large marketings of early lambs and grass-fat yearlings in May and June. Wet weather has delayed marketing, but conditions generally have been exceptionally favorable for the early lamb crop.

Wool is bringing the highest prices since 1929.

Production of early, second early and intermediate strawberries is expected to be considerably larger than last year. The southern peach crop is also expected to be larger—the largest, in fact, since 1931. The

71 COUNTY RESIDENTS HELPED BY OLD AGE SECURITY PROGRAM

Four hundred seventy one residents of El Dorado County received assistance under the State Old Age Security program during April, 1941. Receiving an average of $38.65 each, the total expenditure in this county was $18,204.36.

"The number of old age security recipients in California is still rising steadily," according to Martha A. Chickering, director of the state department of social welfare. "Every month continues to see over a thousand persons added to the rolls. This gradual rising has been noticeable every month during the past year."

Throughout California there were 154,527 old age security recipients in April, the state department reported. The total cost to federal, state and county governments of financing this program was $5,844,101.78.

AAA Parity Loan Bill Signed By President

WASHINGTON, (UP)—President Roosevelt today signed the 85 per cent parity loan bill for wheat, cotton, corn, rice and tobacco, but made it clear that he would hold congressional leaders to an agreement to make commensurate cuts in cash parity appropriations.

As Miss Edwards is supplying so many fine recipes and so many stimulating ideas for home decoration and home conveniences at the homecraft institute this week, may I take this opportunity to report on the National Hobby Show held in Oakland last week?

The active hobbies of gardening, sports, scouting, magic and photography—though this last is a creating and collecting hobby as well as an active one—were represented as were the creative hobbies in which model yachts, airplanes and engines held the small fry fascinated.

Old newspapers from every state in the union made an interesting display. Dime novels including Nick Carter and Diamond Dick were one man's hobby, bone dishes and footed goblets another's. Hundreds of pipes were proudly displayed by one collector while a variety of candlesticks ranging from a pair of Batavian tin to a handsome pair with cut crystal tear drops were the joy and pride of another collector. Stamps and coins wad their devotees.

I couldn't begin to enumerate the "oddities" but among them were a church and steeple made of matches, tiny books, one-quarter the size of a postage stamp, cranberry necklaces, leaves of trees put to decorative uses, ships in bottles. More than one collector displayed inlay pictures. In one of these pictures several kinds of wood had been used—amaranth from Dutch Guiana, mahogany, English holly, hawthorn and walnut.

Before the crowd gather at Mrs. Bradley's button counter, I asked her to show me her most precious possession. She immediately brought out an ivory button with a design of Windsor castle upon it. Her collection contained cards of Cloisones and Satsumas, sparkling jets, one-holders, and abalones. A Dun-kirk pearl had a timely significance and so had the Egyptian collection with its Isis, Cleopatra, Pharaohs and scarabs. Mrs. Bradley's favorite button is a button with the head of the Divine Sarah as L'Aiglon.

One could spend an entire evening in front of Mrs. McKay's daguerreotypes. Her oldest is one of San Francisco harbor in 1850 which shows the sailing vessels bringing the Argonauts. Another valuable one in a handsome case shows the gallant members of an early San Francisco fire company. Daguerreotypes of Henry Clay and Thomas Edison had a prominent place in her display.

Next to Mrs. Lillian Oldmixon's handkerchief collection which numbers over 1200. She showed an English bandana which has been in her family since 1823. Color and pattern are still bright and pleasing. Among the most exquisite was a Russian bandana which contained a picture of a national hero and his story in Russian type. Unusual was the handkerchief of coarse cloth from the Belgian Congo. One of the most attractive in the collection was a delicate one of yellow silk which was a printed program commemorating the opening of the first Opera House in the state of Iowa. The performance was "The Gipsy Baron."

Reluctantly I left the handkerchiefs only to find myself captivated by the Graham doll collection. Of these the hundred year old doll of Italian olive wood with joints that rotated was easily the queen. Following close for second honors were the old wax dolls with real hair that had been set in a strand at a time. The third choice (these are purely personal choices) went to the quaint wooden doll from the English fishing village of Gloucester.

Mrs. Rohl's shell collection attracted many people. The sea urchins were a novelty but the "Chinese slippers" from Halfmoon Bay were lovely as were those jewels of the sea-dotted Pandoras, thin delicate clam shells.

When I asked Mr. Cooper which one of his hundreds of bells had the sweetest sound, he reached for a silver bell that had been presented to him and to his wife on their 25th wedding anniversary. A Chinese bronze wind bell was his second choice. The oldest in the Cooper collection was the large bell that had been used to call the pupils of the Sloughhouse school in 1862. Mexican clay bells, mule team bells, glass bells, turkey bells each had their special interest and story. Most romantic was the Basque sheep bell that had been given to Mr. Cooper by one of the Greiliches of Drytown. The bell had a bone clapper and a carrying sound that could be heard across far meadows.

Today doctors recommend a hobby along with vitamins. Certainly many people are riding them and getting a lot of fun and interest out of them. To be sure a large hobby show has its points but it also has its drawbacks. For one thing, it lacks the intimacy and the spirit of friendliness that pervaded our own recent hobby show.

3-Ton Boulder Crushes Woman Serving Picnic

PALOS VERDES ESTATES (UP)—A three-ton boulder split off from a Malaga Cove cliff yesterday and instantly killed Mrs. Thelma Harding, 29, Venice, as she was serving food at a family beach picnic. Her husband, L. C. Harding, their three daughters, and another family at the picnic saw the rock falling and scrambled out of the way.
